

THE TRADING BOSS MANIFESTO

A trading boss is the person who takes control of their financial destiny and does something about it. It doesn't matter what their job, income, level of education, gender or race. A trading boss sees an opportunity to reach their financial goals and takes the steps to make it happen.

A trading boss understands that the quest to become financial free through learning to use the stock market requires hard work. It requires training. It requires dedication. It is no place for the "get-rich-quick" crowd or for those who want to reap the benefits without putting in the hard work.

A trading boss wants positive results. A trading boss wants success. A trading boss sees the potential gain that comes with trading the market and will not rest until they've done everything in their power to get there.

A trading boss recognizes there will be friends, family and co-workers who won't understand or support their mission. A trading boss will shut out all the outside noise and focus on taking the steps needed to complete their journey.

A trading boss will take the trainings, choose to use the best tools, and set aside the time to practice their craft. With preparation will come confidence, achievement, and success.

A trading boss will strive to become the best trader possible and, in doing so, will have the skills and ability to make the trades that can put them on the road to reaching their personal financial goals – regardless of how modest or grandiose those dreams may be.

A trading boss adopts the mentality to put aside all doubts, all fears and all excuses – and takes action.
